Built for the person holding the campus together.

> You are the one balancing teachers, substitutes, parents, the master schedule, and results, often in the same afternoon. When someone pitches a new program, you are already counting prep time, sub days, family questions, and what the business office will ask.

Money Nobody Taught You (MNTY) was shaped with that day in mind. It is a story-based financial literacy curriculum for students ages 12–18: 30 illustrated books in two sequential series of 15. Students follow characters through money decisions and their results.

WHAT THIS IS MEANT TO TAKE OFF YOUR PLATE

Teacher time. The free teacher toolkit (lesson plans, answer keys, quiz scorer) is there for teachers to review before you commit. On a substitute day, Sub Day gives the sub a today-only lesson link.

Schedule fit. Series 1 first, then Series 2: a clear sequence you can place in a course or block without rebuilding the master schedule around it.

Campus accountability. The Texas standards map (fully / partially / not covered, with book references) is posted at mntyedu.com/state-standards, so you can document coverage and answer parents and the district with the same map.

THREE SIMPLE NEXT STEPS

1. Start a free classroom trial
   One classroom, one school year, with an access code from mntyedu.com/free-code. A low-risk way to see how it lands.
2. Request a school or district quote
   Whole-School is $2,499 per school per year, plus applicable sales tax. District (minimum 3 schools) is $1,999 per school per year, plus applicable sales tax. Email support@mntyedu.com for PO and invoicing details.
3. Review the standards map
   Open it at mntyedu.com/state-standards before you brief teachers or the business office.

If this sounds useful for your campus, I would be glad to hear from you. Nothing here asks you to decide today — only to look, try one classroom if you want, and decide on your timeline.

> I built Money Nobody Taught You because no one taught me these money lessons growing up, and I always wished someone had. These books are my way of breaking that cycle, so your students learn them while they are young.
