How MNTY Compares

Schools have several good options for teaching personal finance. This sheet shows how Money Nobody Taught You fits alongside three well-known programs, using only facts each provider publishes about itself (checked October 14, 2026). Many schools use more than one.

	Money Nobody Taught You (Teen Edition)	Ramsey: Foundations in Personal Finance	EVERFI	Next Gen Personal Finance (NGPF)
Cost to schools	Free classroom trial: one classroom, one school year: $2,499 whole school: $1,999 per school for districts (3+; starts at $5,997), per year; tax added at checkout	Custom quote based on student count and use [1]. Homeschool digital edition $84.99 per student [2]	Free to schools; costs covered by sponsoring partners [3][4]	Free; nonprofit funded by an endowment and philanthropy [5][6]
Format	30 illustrated story books, one continuing story; about 10 minutes a day of read-aloud, no prep	Curriculum with video lessons and assessments (homeschool edition: digital textbook, streaming video, auto-graded assessments) [2]	Digital, scenario-based courses: 18 financial education resources, 25 hours digital + 65 hours offline [3]	Semester, full-year, middle school and Financial Algebra courses with lesson plans and assessments [5]
Standards	Maps for all 50 states, each checked against the state's official standards, at mntyedu.com/state-standards	Florida-adopted versions for Florida courses [7]	Aligned to the National Jump$tart Standards; state guides on request [3]	National Standards, with state crosswalks [5]

Where MNTY is different

- A story teens want to finish, made for students who don't like textbooks.
- No student accounts and no student data (mntyedu.com/privacy).
- Each book opens with a historical page of classic money principles paired with founding-father quotes.
- The same short quiz before and after, with a printable one-page principal report.

License scope: A school license gives one school all digital materials (Series 1 and Series 2 books, teacher materials, toolkits and the full character guide) for one school year. Physical paperbacks are not included; they are sold separately at $499 per 15-book set plus $17 shipping.

Sources: [1] ramseysolutions.com/education/foundations-personal-finance-hs [2] store.ramseysolutions.com/youth/foundations-curriculum/foundations-in-personal-finance-homeschool-edition-fully-digital/ [3] everfi.com/k-12/financial-education/ [4] support.everfi.com/everfi-cost [5] ngpf.org/district-support/ [6] ngpf.org/about-us/ [7] ramseysolutions.com/education/us/fl. Program names belong to their owners. Details change, so check each provider's site for current information.

© 2026 Money Nobody Taught You. Licensed for classroom use. Do not alter or resell.