Re: Sole-source status of Money Nobody Taught You: Teen Edition

To whom it may concern,

Money Nobody Taught You: Teen Edition is written, illustrated, published and licensed only by Paul Blankenburg, doing business as Money Nobody Taught You. No distributor, reseller or other vendor is authorized to sell school licenses for it. Schools can buy it only from Money Nobody Taught You, directly or through mntyedu.com.

The program has these features together, and as far as we know no other product has all of them:

- An illustrated story program for teens in two progressive series of 15 books each (30 books in all). One continuing story with the same characters, and one money topic per book (Series 1: currency, inflation, credit, interest, banks, taxes, business, debt, insurance, investing, the stock market, scams, recessions, retirement accounts, wills).
- About 10 minutes a day of read-aloud with no teacher prep, plus teacher guides, a student workbook, a parent letter and a before-and-after class quiz with a one-page principal report.
- State standards maps for all 50 states, each built by checking the state's official standards one at a time.
- A historical page of classic money principles paired with founding-father quotes at the start of each book.
- No student accounts and no student data collected.

A school license gives one school all digital materials (Series 1 and Series 2 books, teacher materials, toolkits and the full character guide) for one school year. Physical paperbacks are not included; they are sold separately at $499 per 15-book set plus $17 shipping. Prices are the same for every school and are published at mntyedu.com/buy.

Sincerely,
